RESO TYPING

Brief guide to a complete resolution

What is a resolution?

The resolution is a formal statement of an opinion proposed by the delegates on how to deal with a given issue.

The goal of the committee work!

A successful resolution must do two things:

1. identify and explain the problem that needs to be addressed (the introductory clauses)
2. propose a solution that will address the problem as identified (the operative clauses).

Structure

1. Heading
2. Introductory clauses
3. Operative clauses

1. Heading

a. the name of the committee
b. the topic
c. “Motion for a resolution by … ”
d. “Submitted by … ” e.g.

Motion for a Resolution by the Committee on

Social Justice - SJC

According to the 2023 WPFI, the environment for journalism is non-satisfactory in 7 out of 10 countries with the safety of journalists and the freedom of speech being endangered. Considering that government interference in the media, abusive lawsuits and insufficient legal protections along with the arbitrary surveillance of journalists by intelligence agencies have led to Greece being the lowest ranked country in the EU in the WPFI, how can the EU provide journalists with a safe working environment that favours plurality?

2. Introductory clauses

This portion of a resolution identifies and states the problem that needs to be addressed.

These clauses deal with the background to the issue e.g.

a. Aspects of the current situation
b. Current legislation
c. Previous attempted solutions
d. Reference to organisations active in the field.

The problem should be stated in factual terms and opinions are not expressed in this portion of the resolution. Introductory clauses should be organised in a logical progression and each fact should be listed as a separate clause.

2. Introductory clauses

a. Each clause begins with a present participle (called an introductory phrase) that should be underlined in the text with the first letter capitalised.

   e.g. Acknowledging / Deeply alarmed / Keeping in mind / Reaffirming / Supporting / Taking into account / Welcoming

a. The introductory clauses are always lettered (A, B, C etc.). If a clause requires further explanation, bulleted lists set off by roman numerals (i, ii, iii etc.) can be used.
b. Each introductory clause ends with a comma (,), including the final one.

The European Parliament,

A. Acknowledging the press being the “fourth power” as an unbiased and protected source of information and ideas,

B. Noting with deep concern the increasing number of attacks, harassment, and detentions of journalists globally, as reported by the Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) and Reporters Without Borders (RSF),

C. Recalling Article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which affirms that "everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression," including the right to seek, receive, and disseminate information through any media,

3. Operative clauses

The operative clauses state the actions and/or recommendations that are made to address the problems identified in the introductory clauses. Therefore there should be some connection of problem to a solution.

Because resolving most problems involves an exercise of judgment, this is the portion of the resolution where the Committee expresses its opinion.

The operative clauses are proposals, which taken together, would comprise a solution to the problem, a policy response. They should recommend or decide, if competent to do so, on a specific course of action to be taken to solve the problem. Operative clauses should be organised in a logical progression, with each containing a single idea or proposal.

3. Operative clauses

a. Each operative clause begins with a verb (called an operative phrase) that should be underlined in the text with the first letter capitalised.

   e.g. Calls (for/upon) / Encourages / Invites / Proposes / Recommends / Suggests / Supports / Urges

a. Operative clauses are always numbered (1, 2, 3 etc.). If a clause requires further explanation, bulleted lists set off by letters (a, b, c etc.) can be used.
b. Each operative clause ends with a semicolon (;), except for the final one which ends with a full-stop (.).

3. Operative clauses

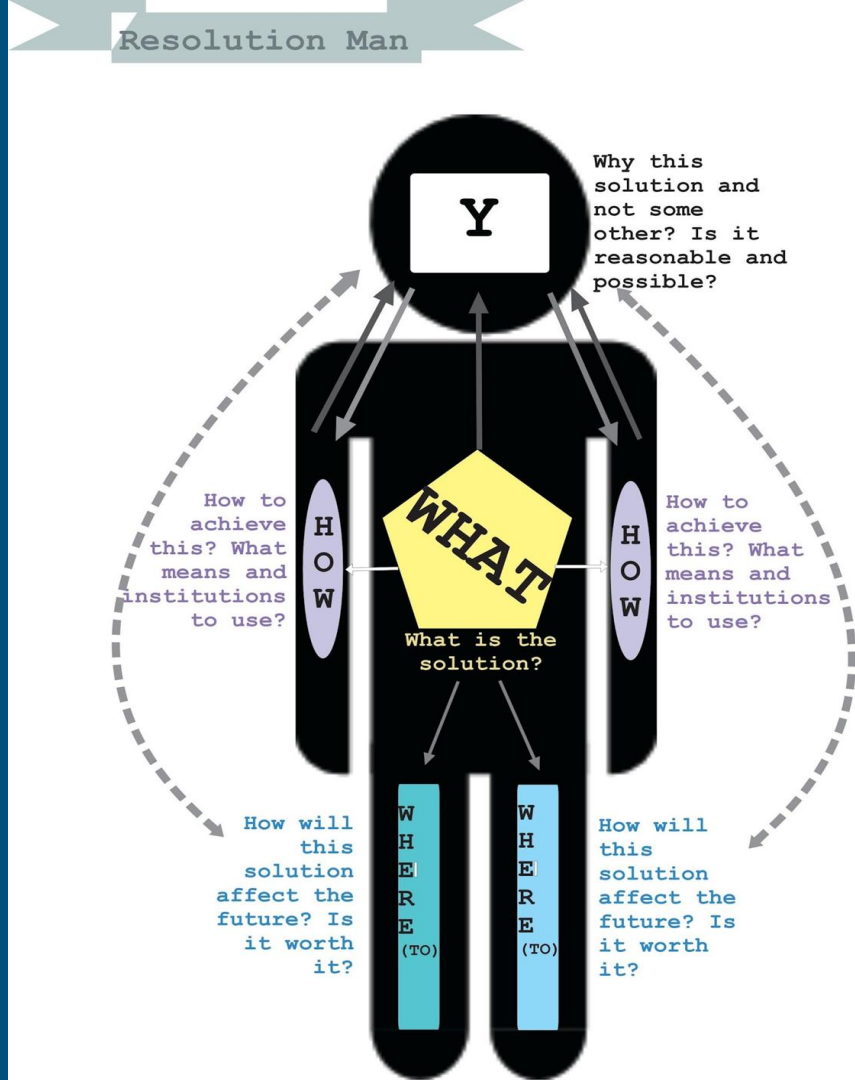

4 QUESTIONS:

WHAT? What is the solution about?

WHY? Why this solution and not some other?

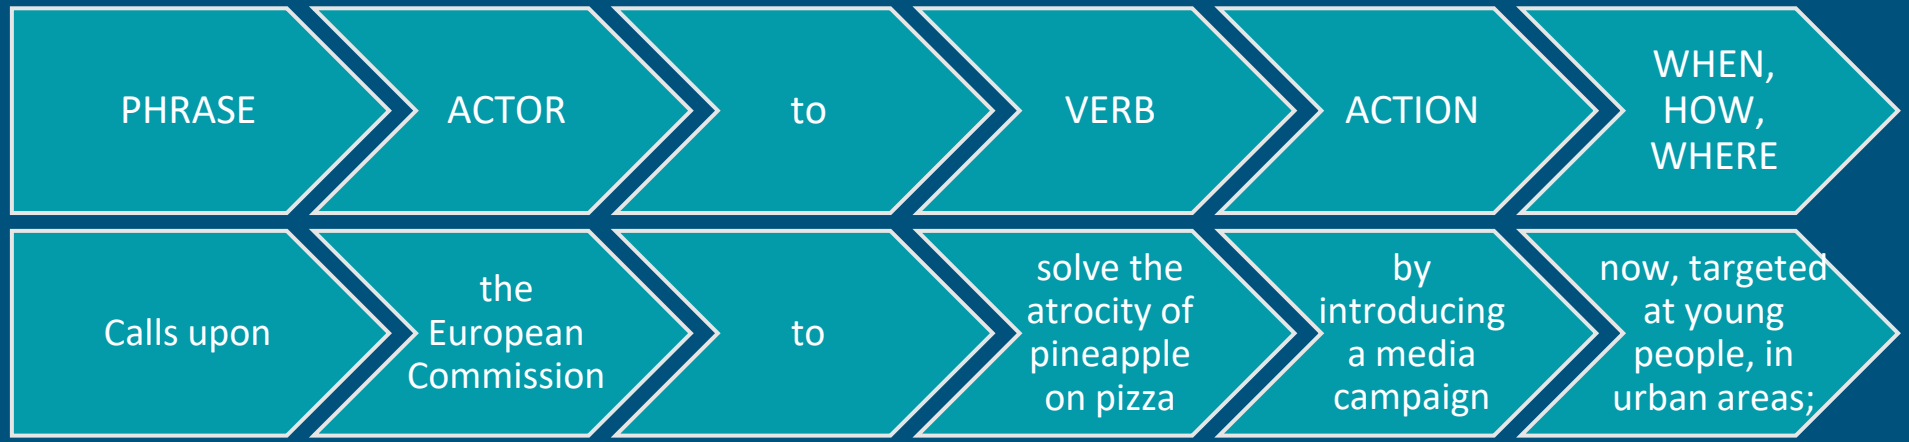

HOW? How to achieve this solution? Which means and institutions to use?

WHERE TO? How will this solution affect the future?

3. Operative clauses

Structure!!

1. Proposes the creation of a unionwide system monitoring and funding independent journalism and EU state media outlets to prevent government interference;

2. Suggests the creation of an EU-wide legal support fund system that will

i. support journalists facing SLAPPs and provide financial and legal assistance to those embroiled in costly litigation, making it easier for journalists to defend their rights without financial ruin,

ii. provide financial incentives to attorneys representing journalists in SLAPP-related legal cases so as to minimise the cost for journalists;

3. Urges the application of the journalistic code of ethics by all journalists and media outlets which can be achieved through thorough education by the European Commission and the European Federation of Journalists and media regulations with the aim of limiting the prevalence of yellow press;
